To the People Who Worked At Mt. Carmel Cemetery:

Last March, when the vandalism occurred at Mt. Carmel Cemetery, I went to check on my grandfather's grave (Maurice Brown), and found the headstone was separated from the base and lying on the ground. The first day I went was the day after the attack, and there were lots of volunteers and the media. I went a few days later when I heard on the radio restoration had started. I talked to two of the workmen there who were beyond friendly, and helpful and nice. I showed them the stone (which was probably knocked over in a prior act of vandalism) and asked if they could do anything about it, and also asked if this was a result of age or weather related, and they assured me that someone would've had to push it over. They said it wasn't a big deal to fix it and they'd be happy to do it, and they added that the fact that I was there showed I cared and it meant something.

I went a few more times after that, and the work hadn't been done, and again they assured me it would be done. Then life got in the way and I wasn't able to get over there to check.

Last Friday, I was driving nearby and went to check again, and was thrilled to find the stone upright the way it should be. It made me very happy!

So on behalf of my family, I wanted to thank you from the bottom of my heart for coming through and let you know what you did is very much appreciated!

Sincerely,

Peter S. Brown
